

Isn't Christianity Illogical and Unscientific - discussion

Case #1

Your son Jake is 16 and has just started in the 6th form where he is studying A-level Maths, Physics and Chemistry. He became a Christian when he was 13 at a summer camp and is an active member of your church. He was baptised in water and has been filled with the Holy Spirit and speaks in tongues. He plays the drums in the worship band and helps with the youth work.

One day he comes home from school and asks if he can talk with you. He tells you that he is now fully convinced about the Big Bang theory and evolution and can no longer be a Christian because he is not sure about the Bible being true.

What do you do?

- 1) Show him Hebrews 6:4-6 and warn him about the danger of falling away
- 2) Give him a book on biblical Creation and hope and pray that he will be convinced
- 3) Tell him that you love him whatever happens and pray for him but don't say too much
- 4) Pray over him and engage in spiritual warfare for your son
- 5) Any other ideas....

Case #2

You work with Sophie who is intelligent, beautiful, humorous, confident, calm and by far the most popular person in your office. She is very happily married to Charles, who is a scientist and the perfect husband. She has two bright and happy children. She is healthy, fit, runs regularly, swims and uses the gym. She has an amazingly tidy house and life just seems so good for her in every way. She doesn't seem to need anything. She is kind, generous and helps with a local charity but doesn't believe in God.

You would like to share the gospel with her but are finding it difficult to know where to start? Any ideas?

Discuss

On page five of the information there are 4 views on creation/evolution:

- Which of these represent your own view?
- Do you strongly disagree with some of these views?
- Do you think it is helpful to let people know that Christians deal with these issues in different ways?
- Do you think creation/evolution is an important issue for modern people when they are considering becoming a Christian?
